

The camera in your smart glasses

Skill Reality shows work instructions in your smart glasses, one step at a time. At a few important steps, the glasses camera takes one picture so the step can be checked. This page explains what that means for you.

Does the camera record video all day?

No. There is no continuous video. The camera does not record your shift.

When does the camera take a picture?

Only at steps your employer has marked critical. The glasses take one picture of the work at that step so it can be checked.

Will my face be in the pictures?

The picture is of the work in front of you. Faces are blurred on the device before upload.

What is saved about me?

Who did each step, which step, the time and whether the check passed. At critical steps, the picture, with faces blurred.

Who can see my records?

People your employer gives access to, based on their role. Your employer sets who can see what.

How long are records kept?

Your employer sets how long pictures and records are kept.

Can someone watch me live?

Only in a remote expert session, which you start from the glasses when you want help.

What can I ask for?

Ask your employer which steps use the camera, what is saved about you, who can see it, how long it is kept, and for a copy of your records.
